

STUDY GUIDE

Agenda:

Upholding accountability and transparency as the fourth pillar of democracy.

Dear Reporters, Journalists, Correspondents,

Welcome to the International Press Corps. It is with great pleasure that we serve as the Editorial Board for this conference. We are excited to embark on this journey with you, guiding you through the intricacies of journalism within the MUN framework.

The strength of the press lies in its independence, its dedication to truth, and its ability to convey information with clarity and impact. As members of the International Press Corps, your mission is to uphold these principles, delivering reports that are accurate, objective, and insightful.

Approach your assignments with creativity, diligence, and a keen eye for detail.

This guide contains essential information about our guidelines and expectations. While it provides a solid foundation, we encourage you to delve deeper through your own research to enrich your understanding and reporting. Your preparation and dedication will be key to the success of our collective endeavor.

We are here to assist you, so please do not hesitate to reach out with any questions or for additional guidance. Our aim is to make your experience both educational and enjoyable, fostering an environment where you can grow and excel as journalists. Let's work together to make this conference a memorable and impactful experience.

Best regards,

Head of International Press

ARTICLES AND REPORTS

Press Correspondents are required to write at least one formal report per day. You will be assigned a particular committee and will base your reports on the activities carried out by the allocated committee. The Articles (Opinion Editorials and Beat-Based Articles) can be around 150-250 words, while the Reports should be up to 350-400 words. We strongly suggest you not exceed the word limit.

The report's body is to be written in Times New Roman, Size 12, and the Title in Size 14 or 12, bold.

The articles need to be in Font Size 12 throughout. Unless decided otherwise, please download the file and attach the document to the mail; do not send it as the body of the mail or a link to Google Docs.

STRUCTURE OF REPORTS AND ARTICLES

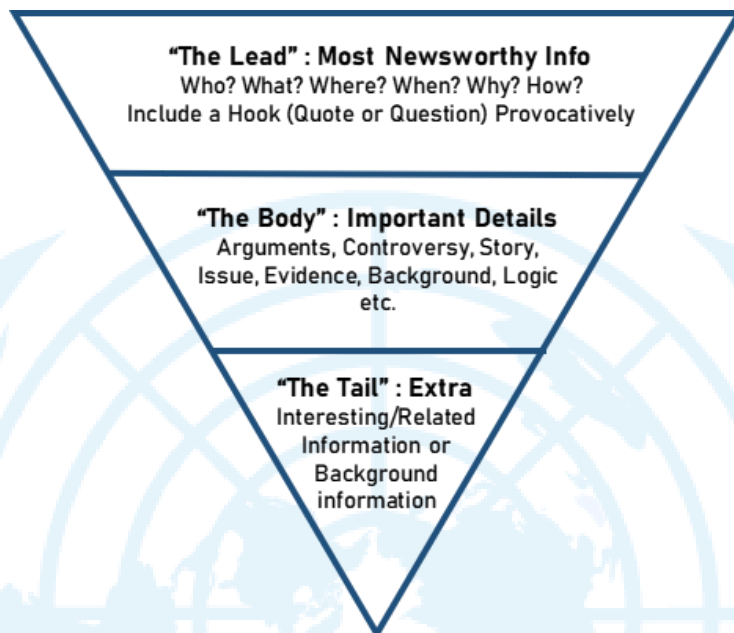

HEADLINE: The headline should be captivating, descriptive, and specific to the article's content.

BYLINE: Include the name of the news agency and the date/location.

LEAD: The opening section of the article should contain the 5W1H (who, what, where, when, why, and how?) answers, and it should convey the most important information. A good lead sets the tone for what follows, so avoid cramming unnecessary information or being repetitive.

BODY: This section is the main part of the article, containing the whole story and elaborating on the essential information presented in the lead. End it with an appropriate closing remark and try to instigate a reaction or question from your reader. You can write it in chronological order.

OpEd and BBA in Inverted Pyramid Style

News Report in Chronological Style

OPINION EDITORIAL (OpEd)

Opinion Editorials “usually represent a writer's strong and focused opinion on an issue of relevance to a targeted audience,” for us, it will represent the reporter’s opinion relevant to the agenda of the committee. Op-Eds allow the reporters to do their own research and express opinions, perspectives, and arguments on the agenda.

We expect the following in an Op-Ed:

- Headline and Byline
- First Paragraph: 5W1H answers, including name of mun, date, where it is taking place, who is hosting it; the agenda of the assigned committee in inverted commas (NOT “IP” BUT ALLOCATED COMMITTEE); one sentence on why the agenda is important
- Second Paragraph: Discuss the past and present scenario and relevance of the agenda in today’s world concerning the committee; make sure to make it legible to common people
- Last Paragraph: Write a short opinion as a reporter of your news agency on the agenda; make sure to write it in a neutral and third-person pov; be as unbiased as possible, but make sure to follow the guidelines of your news agency

Second and Last Paragraphs should not be more than 250 words.

SAMPLE OPINION EDITORIAL

Transnational Organized Crime and Drug Trafficking in the Middle East Conflicts
- Catalan News Agency

The third iteration of the Abcd EfgH Ijkl Model United Nations is set to take place from January 13 to 15, 2023. This will unite 7 prominent UN committees along with the International Press Corps. Among the active committees, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) will focus on the critical agenda, “Combining Transnational Organized Crime and Drug Trafficking in the Context of Ongoing Middle East Conflicts.” This subject matter is particularly urgent, considering that many delegates hail from countries that have been profoundly impacted by these persistent conflicts, making them key stakeholders in the discussion.

The Middle East is facing significant challenges due to ongoing conflicts, particularly in Iraq, Syria, and Yemen. These conflicts have weakened governments and overall stability, creating an environment where organized crime and drug trafficking can thrive. As these regions become more unstable, the movement of illegal goods increases, providing lucrative opportunities for smugglers and criminals. There has been a noticeable rise in amphetamine seizures in the region, especially involving tablets bearing the Captagon logo. The commitment and capacity of countries in the Middle East to address these issues vary widely, largely due to ongoing conflicts like the Israeli-Palestinian situation and instability in Iraq and Sudan. These conflicts contribute to a climate that fosters drug trafficking, firearms trade, and human smuggling, benefiting both international and local criminal organizations. The impact of drug trafficking goes beyond the Middle East, as illicit drugs often enter global markets, leading to higher rates of addiction and public health issues worldwide.

Addressing organized crime and drug trafficking requires collaboration on local, regional, and international levels. A united global response is essential for breaking the cycle of violence and instability. The upcoming AEIMUN sessions offer an opportunity for delegates to discuss these challenges and build vital alliances. Through collective action and shared resources, we can dismantle networks exploiting conflicts and promote peace, particularly in the Middle East, emphasizing the importance of cooperation among regional and international partners.

BEAT-BASED ARTICLE (BBA)

A beat-based article is a news article that focuses on a specific area of interest within the committee sessions. The aim of a beat-based article is to notify people who were absent from the committee about the committee proceedings, providing a detailed and informative account.

A beat-based article is concentrated around a ‘beat’ or turning point of the committee and offers a concise summary of key discussions, decisions, and the overall trajectory of the committee's deliberations. It can be up to 250 words.

To craft an effective beat-based article, journalists must maintain a neutral tone, avoiding personal opinions and focusing on factual reporting. The article should be well-structured, with a clear introduction, body, and conclusion. The introduction should briefly outline the topic and the main points to be discussed. The body should give the details, including quotes from delegates and observations from the journalist. The conclusion should summarize the key takeaways and the impact of the discussion.

One particular sub-topic in the discussion can be taken as the main focus by the journalist but giving an all-round outline of the article will be appreciated. The main/core idea of the article must be conveyed to the reader clearly and briefly.

CONSPIRACY AGAINST YOUR OWN

- The Indian Express

The AIPPM (All India Political Parties Meet) committee was left stunned after a prominent member of the Congress Party, Mr. Rahul Gandhi, made the controversial statement, "AFSPA can never bring peace." The opposition party and the chair started questioning him while the motion was still ongoing.

The committee was having a heated discussion regarding the AFSPA (Armed Forces Special Powers Act) and the dire crisis in the North-Eastern states when Mr. Rahul abruptly made the provocative statement. The chair then questioned how he could make that statement given that the AFSPA was implemented during the reign of Mr. Jawaharlal Nehru, Mr. Rahul Gandhi's great-grandfather. Mr. Shah of the opposition party questioned whether Mr. Rahul Gandhi was disowning his own grandfather's leadership and attempting to acknowledge that his government had failed in its judgment. Mr. Gandhi was silent for a while until the chair intervened and asked him if he agreed or disagreed with his statements and urged him to answer with a simple "Yes or No" to which Mr. Rahul Gandhi answered with "Yo" - the combination of yes and no. Mr. Gandhi refused to address any questions about this and completely avoided it. With the North-East states problem, the committee had more pressing concerns than this situation. So, as the debate heated up, the reason for Rahul Gandhi's statement remained unclear.

SAMPLE REPORT

QUESTIONS REMAIN UNANSWERED

- The Fox News

July 27, 2023 — With a quorum being met only barely, the committee sessions of the United Nations Environment Programme resumed on the second day at exactly 9:27 AM. The delegations of certain countries were quick to question other delegates, just like the first day. As China, Bharat, and Russia were requested to reveal plans for the reduction of their greenhouse gas emissions by the delegate of Pakistan, the delegate of Bharat was the first to reply, all they did was cross-question the delegate of Pakistan. Was the committee actually going to work towards a solution or just play a game of questions and comments? But again, hopes were restored as the delegate of Brazil talked about their achievements regarding climate change because of their alliance with the USA, showing how global cooperation can prove to be an effective cure.

The delegate of Pakistan wasn't the only one making remarks at other delegates, as the delegate of Australia uncovered evidence regarding illicit monetary activities conducted by carbon offsetting companies in Papua New Guinea. This was interesting because, throughout the whole committee session, the delegate of Papua New Guinea never got back to the delegate of Australia regarding those companies, neither verbally nor via chat. While many delegates were keen on asking questions, not many were answered, with most being replied to with another question.

The committee also discussed how climate change can harm Indigenous properties, with the delegate of Finland providing a strong point on how the melting of glaciers can lead to the drowning of Indigenous properties. Additionally, the committee fully acknowledged the danger to indigenous people with the changing climate, emphasizing urgency in drafting a solution. Along with the danger of indigenous properties, the committee also addressed indigenous racial discrimination in different countries, which took a controversial turn when the shadow delegate of North Korea shed light on the lack of voting rights for the Sami people living in the northern part of Norway.

Lastly, the committee shortly discussed the topic “Solutions for the Agenda,” where twenty delegations spoke on the matter. More solution-oriented caucuses are expected to be discussed in the committee so that a meaningful resolution can be drafted.

News reports are typically written in the "inverted pyramid structure," starting with a lead paragraph—the who, what, when, where, why, and how of a story— that conveys the most essential facts of the story, followed by detailed subsequent paragraphs which are less crucial but nonetheless relevant. It can also be written in chronological order—writing events in the order they happened.

SEPARATED BY DIFFERENCES, UNITED BY ISSUES

-Cable News Network-

Disappointment marked the Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC) of XYZMUN’s session on climate change. Russia's green energy claims clashed with prior remarks criticizing renewables, raising concerns about sincerity. Brazil's use of Wikipedia for research and the denial of press access fueled transparency worries. As Russia deflected with historical references, the need for genuine collaboration and accountability in tackling climate challenges became starkly evident.

This incident of the ECOSOC, alongside cultural clashes in the Social, Humanitarian & Cultural Committee (SOCHUM), highlighted how complex international dialogue can be and the importance of transparency, collaboration, and principled leadership in addressing global issues.

BREAKING NEWS AND NEWS UPDATE

BREAKING NEWS

Any statements that are made in committee that are peculiar or controversial, and extremely important, qualify under Breaking News, and when they are dispatched late, they become News Updates. These statements are to be mailed or texted with the Subject: BREAKING NEWS as soon as possible after the words leave the delegate's mouth.

For example:

“There will never be a better American President than Donald Trump,” claims the delegate of the USA. - Australian United Press | SOCHUM

They are to be sent without delay or grammatical errors. Only extremely important information should be sent as breaking news.

NEWS BULLETINS

News Updates defined above, when presented together, in either text or audio/visual video forms, as a form of information dissemination, are considered news bulletins or highlights.

All such statements must be promptly mailed or texted to the editorial team to ensure timely coverage. At the end of Day 1 and/or Day 2, a special Video News Bulletin will also be produced to highlight the major developments.

The reporters are to copy-paste it directly to the email provided.

Sample News Bulletin:

Type 2: <https://www.instagram.com/p/DKVloRDT-ZI/>

Type 3: <https://www.instagram.com/p/DJioAI-Sf0h/>

They are to be sent by the end of the lunch, unless advised otherwise.

INTERVIEWS

Every Reporter is required to take at least two interviews throughout the conference. An interview can have 8-10 full-length questions and 5-8 rapid-fire questions. Interviews are of two types: Formal Interviews, which include interviewing them as a representative and not them personally, and Informal Interviews, which include some informal questions about their personal lives.

Discuss beforehand with your fellow press members before taking an interview, as in the case of overlapped interviews, the one submitted later will be disregarded.

This is to be done on the second day, hence the reporters are requested to draft questions on the first day itself. Remember to run these questions through the Head of Press before taking the interview.

The interviews required from the press correspondents are:

1. Formal Interview of an Executive Board Member.
2. Informal Interview of a delegate.

Method:

A well-written interview, along with an audio recording (with permission of the interviewee) is required. Ask a photographer to take pictures of them for the article but be mindful of the interviewee's privacy and maintain anonymity if requested. (the format and a sample are attached below)

“MUNs had a much greater significance in the past...”

- Al Arabia -

We all thought Abdul Shahi liked the Federal Parliament the most. But, today a new secret has been revealed; he likes another committee! To clear your doubts, Al Arabia introduces you to a short interview with a humble, loving, caring, fun, and talented delegate of UNHRC, Mr. Abdul Shahi.

Could you introduce yourself with your name, age, and where you are from?

- I was born sometime between 1996 to 2004. My name is Abdul Shahi. I was born and raised in Nagaland. I recently moved to Kathmandu 4 years ago.

How did you get introduced to XYZMUN?

- I was introduced to XYZMUN through the Organizing Members.

Who do you look up to when it comes to living life to the fullest?

- My mother is the person I look up to when it comes to living life to the fullest. To my great pride, my mother takes care of me all by herself. She is the greatest.

What would you say to her younger self?

- I would tell her that she could care less about what others think of her. Other people's perspectives are not necessary.

Do you feel MUNs have lost their charm?

- Yes, I think that MUNs had a much greater significance in the past than it does now. It was once such a well-organized program, but these days, anyone can put one together without any prior planning or expertise.

INFORMAL PIECE

Informal articles are to be written by the reporter according to their will. Informal language can be used and it can be written in a humorous way. The reporters can choose to write on various subjects such as the committee they were allocated to, the struggles of the International Press, the Socials, the MUN as a whole, or any particular experience from the MUN itself. One informal piece is to be submitted by the reporter before lunch on Day 3.

Besides the formal reports, press correspondents are encouraged to write other forms of articles (similar to the Bloody Mary column on the weekly TGIF): these are to be written either under your name or under an alias and are not mandatory but will gain you extra points.

SAMPLE INFORMAL PIECE

WE LOVE THE (non-existent) ATTENTION

by Chief Rapporteur, XYZMUN

Giving attention to details rather than to our own mental health the International Press has been keeping track of everything that has been going on in each committee. The International Press has 10 power rangers — the 100% extrovert BBC, shaking more than the 2072's earthquake IRNA, clumsy CNN, a nervous wreck Associated Press, cute but clinically crazy IPS, an absolute nightmare for a delegate The Moscow Times and his perfect duo Australian United Press, a human-machine Economic Times and the non-biological twins Tehran Times and Kyodo News. The Power Ranger team is nothing without the mentor Zordon – the hidden gem Chief Rapporteur, the chhota packet bada dhamaka Editor-in-Chief, and ze mother of all - the Head of Press.

These power rangers have been ‘Keeping up with the Kardashians’ except the Kardashians were the delegates, the motions, and the heated debates. The IP members clearly had more experience in MUN than on-CAMERA as they kept adding to the limited storage of the Samsung Galaxy S20 Ultra (not sponsored by Samsung, sadly). With The Chief Editor vomiting all day (it was not caused by the articles the reporters provided by the way), the Chief Rapporteur running around trying to collect all the press members, and the Press Head cum Tech Head editing and retaking the bulletin videos at least a hundred times, when all other committees were enjoying the socials, the IP was recording the news updates for the gram. Really, the IP was chaotic at the end of the day, but this chaos was nothing compared to the chaotic breaking news the Press brought to the table.

The desperation for some news from UN-WOMEN was equal to the desperation for sleep and some sanity for the International Press. And bringing breaking news every 2 - 3 seconds – they outdid themselves. At the end of the day, the heroic work done by these superheroes (teenagers with ADHD), EB included, deserves a huge cheque or at least a room with a better-adjusted smart board and good lighting. But all we get is your attention, that too if you have read the article this far.

As the curtains draw on the XYZ MUN 2024, it is a must to recognize and applaud the truly phenomenal contribution of the International Press. In a world where the truth can be more bizarre than fiction, these fearless reporters (special mention to the Executive Board) have sacrificed their sanity to fight misinformation and provide a readable report.

The International Press crew at MUN 2024? Let's just say, we're thriving. Between documenting the debates and diving deep into the latest global crises (and maybe a few Tiktoks and reels on the side), we're on top of it all. Imagine "Here comes the hurricane" vibes as the team breezes into each committee session—ready to report on everything from serious resolutions to the occasional delegate side-eye. And it's not just about serving facts, chat. Oh no, we're about capturing the moments. From the UK delegate's "thank you, Beyoncé" attitude during the GSL to the intense back-and-forth between delegates tackling child trafficking, we're here to keep it real. And, like P. Diddy oiling up for every new round of questions, we're ready to drop headline after headline.

Behind the scenes, it's a combo of caffeine and sheer willpower, balancing the Blonde Glamour energy with serious journalism skills. Each day feels like "Let me do it for you" with nonstop energy, insightful press briefings, and the occasional "Did that just happen?" moment that makes us love what we do. So, if you're looking for the latest scoop, you know who's got you covered. We're here to serve the news and the tea straight from the kettle boiling hot. And while delegates gear up for that last day of high-stakes debate, we'll be there, reporting with the kind of flair you'd expect from the IPC. The International Press crew at MUN 2024? Let's just say, we're thriving. Between documenting the debates and diving deep into the latest global crises (and maybe a few Tiktoks and reels on the side(Thank you free world link wifi xoxo #notsponsered #pleasesponser)), we're on top of it all. And let's talk about the plot twist of the century bruh on god, none of us expected to hear Fein blasting through the halls of SMS MUN! The energy in the room? Unreal. Picture everyone vibing to this track like we'd been planning it all along. Delegates were shook, the EB panel was low-key loving it, and the whole MUN experience instantly became ten times more unforgettable. It was the perfect soundtrack for the mood, and honestly, iconic doesn't even cover it. Who knew MUN could be this much of a vibe? Plus infinite aura! It was like we'd entered a whole new world where debates meet dance floors.

To be honest, as much as we bring our flair to the MUN, we wouldn't be here without the incredible team vibes. Working side by side with the IPC has been the real MVP moment of this whole experience. The late-night editing sessions, shared "Chat, why am I even here?" laughs, and hype-up talks before every press briefing make this team something special. From all-nighters with our caffeine warriors to everyone's unbeatable humor and passion, it's honestly been a joy that brings tears of joy in my eyes as I proudly say, WAIT! They don't love you like I love you<3 to my dearest IPC team. Being here with the IPC gang made every minute, every draft, and every scoop unforgettable.

FEATURES

Features are articles where a journalist gets to show their creativity to the maximum. They do not serve as the formal part of the press but need to be committee-centric, or else they do not really serve the purpose of being a part of a MUN newsletter.

Example: a poem about the committee, a handmade/digital drawing, a collage of images, or anything that utilizes your creative talent can be submitted as a Feature Article.

Leading the charge, their impact's pure gold.

PRESS CONFERENCE

The International Press Corps will be conducting a Press Conference on the third day of the MUN for each committee. Every reporter will be present for it and will have to write a report on it as well. The reporters are required to prepare questions (5 questions for different delegates, one question per delegate) to ask the delegates about their committee. It is advised to be prepared with follow-up questions as well. Individual delegates can be questioned about the current happenings of their committee or on events related to the agenda of their committee.

The questions are to be run through the Head of Press before the Press Conference. A set of at least 5 proposed questions for the assigned committee is to be mailed beforehand. Only the questions approved are qualified to be presented in the press conference. Every committee's Press Conference will have 5-8 questions asked, unless stated otherwise. Questions can be directed to the Presiding Officers or the whole committee as well.

An interview-pattern report will be required before the Award Distribution Ceremony. It includes the questions asked by the reporter along with the answers provided by the respective delegate/s.

Please make sure to add the name of the delegate before writing their answers.

SAMPLE PRESS CONFERENCE REPORT

Prominence of digitization of heritages and shared responsibilities

- Press Trust of India -

The grand press conference of XYZ MUN 2024 was conducted on 3rd December 2024 inside the High Campus premises. Most delegates gave wise insights on the questions posed by the press. Nevertheless, some delegates gave remarks of “no comment” even though sensitive and authentic questions were asked. Press Trust of India (PTI) presents narratives of the questions assigned to the delegates.

Most of the national budget is spent on defense and the military. The budget utilized for cultural preservation is negligible. Upon this, how can the nation press charges and impose extra taxes on its citizens when most of the budget is spent on to waste of lives and war?

Delegate of Israel: “Israel has protected our cultural heritage by several actions, including the taxes of citizens. Jerusalem is the core cultural heart of Israel.” Israel diverted the topic completely and then ended with “no comment” to the actual basis of the question. This indicates that Israel has not made plans to preserve and promote the cultural heritage of other nations, which is not favored by the policy of UNESCO.

The UK has argued against returning certain items, citing concerns about the lack of adequate preservation facilities in India. What makes you believe that you have the right to take them? India is perfectly capable of preserving and reinstating its lost articles. How is this nothing more than an excuse?

The honorable delegate did not answer why they believed India to be incapable. Instead, “museums are separate identities, and do not come under the government,” was stated. When a follow-up question on why the UK government was not powerful enough to give justice to India was asked, the government remained silent. This proves that the United Kingdom is making an excuse to keep the valuable heritage and symbols of India to itself.

In the second moderated caucus of the second day, the delegate stated, “Overexposure of digital means would not make tangible and intangible heritages vulnerable to trafficking,” however, the delegate has not clarified why. What is the basis of this affirmation and confidence that digitalization will NOT initiate the trafficking of heritages?

Russia acknowledged the question by stating that the trafficking of digital heritage is the responsibility of the nation to which the loss has occurred. The delegate further clarified that physical trafficking is not possible due to mere digitalization, as the physical security of heritages falls under a completely different entity.

POINTS TO REMEMBER

- Refrain from using personal pronouns in formal reports, and always report in the third person and active voice;
- Report the happenings of the committee, do not include your personal views about any topic in discussion;
- Refrain from changing a delegate's or dais' words, present their unadulterated words in quotes or reported speech;
- Use more rhetorical words over simple vocabulary as it will make the article more formal and standard;
- Ensure clear explanations of the 5Ws and H (Who, What, Where, When, Why, and How);
- An element of humor makes articles more interesting to read and showcases the journalist's skill;
- Use the proper name for all countries on the first reference and abbreviations on the second reference (e.g. Federal Democratic Republic of Nepal and Nepal);
- Do not refer to delegates by their name. Use the position they hold, such as Delegate of India on the first reference and India on the second reference;
- Ensure your article has an appropriate and relevant title that captures the main focus of the article;
- Maintain professionalism by adhering to ethical standards and remaining unbiased in your reporting;
- Instead of reporting word-for-word, focus on the interesting bits and select one important topic as the center of your report;
- Strike a balance between formal and semi-formal tone, and refrain from using informal language in formal reports.
- The Executive Board expects to see all the reporters in the Press Room at the start of each day. Reporters may proceed to their designated committees only marking their attendance.
- Essential information for the upcoming day will be delivered to the reporters at the end of the day, so the reporters should report to the Press Room 30 minutes before departing, every day.

CLOSING REMARKS

While writing in the style of their various agencies, journalists should keep in mind the required code of ethics in reporting.

Furthermore, as press members, all the correspondents are required to maintain a high degree of decorum and professionalism. As a result, no one may disturb the session of any committee while following up with or interviewing delegates, nor may they misuse the privilege of entering and leaving their respective committee.

Please read and refer to your news agency and the headquarters of the agency while reporting and asking questions in the press conference.

Best of Luck, Reporters!

You have a lot of writing and listening ahead of you.

Remember that the International Press is a Team, not a Committee.

Get to know your teammates!

And have fun spilling out the truth~
